

¿Qué va a tomar al desayuno?

This simple activity aims to give learners practice in understanding when someone asks what they'd like for breakfast, and the confidence to reply. Learners not only order for themselves but also hear other members of the group ordering, and the built-in repetition breeds familiarity and reinforces the vocabulary.

Getting ready

Display the illustrations on page 2 to present and practise the vocabulary that will be used in the activity. Make sure too that learners recognise the key phrase ¿Qué va a tomar?.

For the activity, after blanking out the printed words but keeping the numbering 1 to 12, print the illustrations directly onto a sheet of card. This is the board for the game ¿Qué va a tomar al desayuno?. For each small group of learners you'll need one board and also two dice.

For the variation, again print the illustrations onto thin card, but this time cut them into individual cards, a set for each group of three learners.

Getting them talking

Divide the class into groups of 3 or 4 and give each group a board and two dice. Members of the group take turns to throw the dice and land on the drink formed from the sum of the two numbers. Tell the players to throw just one die every now and again; otherwise no one ever lands on Number 1.

As each person throws the dice, the others in the group ask ¿Qué va a tomar al desayuno? The dice-thrower replies according to the drink indicated by the dice, e.g. 2+3 > 5: un zumo de naranja, por favor or 5+6 > 11: un agua mineral con gas, por favor.

Variation

You could play Big Breakfast, a version of Kim's Game. Cut out the 12 pictures and share them equally among the group. One person asks the question ¿Qué va a tomar al desayuno? to each member in turn. One by one they order the item from their cards, but first they must also remember to order what has gone before. The list gets longer and longer ... and remembering all 12 in the right order is quite a feat.
